COOKIE POLICY

WHAT IS A COOKIE AND WHAT IS IT FOR?

Cookies are small text files which the websites operated by the user transfer to the user's terminal (usually the browser), where they are stored in memory and sent back to the same websites if the user visits them again.

When navigating on a website, users may also receive cookies from different websites or web servers on their terminal (the so-called "third-party cookies"), containing components (such as images, maps, audio or specific links to web pages in other domains) available on the website that the user is visiting.

TYPES OF COOKIE

SESSION COOKIES AND PERSISTENT COOKIES

Cookies can either last for a browser session or be persistent. Session cookies are automatically deleted when the browser window is closed. Persistent cookies are stored on the user's device until deletion or for the period of time specified in the cookie.

TECHNICAL COOKIES AND PROFILING COOKIES

Technical cookies are used for the sole purpose of "transmitting a communication on an electronic communication network, or as strictly necessary to allow the provider of an information service to provide such service explicitly required by the website subscriber or user" (as per art. 122, paragraph 1 of the Privacy Code).

These cookies are not used for any other purposes and are usually installed by the Data Controller or Webmaster.

They can be classified as follows:

- navigation or session cookies, which ensure normal navigation or use of the website (for instance, allowing the user to make purchases or perform authentication to access reserved areas);
- analytics cookies, which are similar to technical cookies in that they are directly used by the webmaster to gather information, in the aggregate, on the number of users and on how they visit the website;
- functionality cookies, which allow the website to remember the choices or changes made by the user (such as the language and products selected for purchase) in order to provide enhanced and more personal features.

These cookies do not require the user's consent to installation.

Profiling cookies are designed to create user profiles and to deliver targeted advertisements, which are more relevant to the user and to his/her interests shown during Internet browsing.

Due to the potential for invasion of privacy, according to European and Italian law, users must be adequately informed about the use of such cookies and consent to their use. Article 122 of the Privacy Code provides that: "The filing of information in the computer of a contracting party or of a user or the access to already filed information is only allowed on condition that the contracting party or the user has expressed his/her consent after being informed in the streamlined manner as per art. 13, paragraph 3 of the Privacy Code".

FIRST-PARTY AND THIRD-PARTY COOKIES

First-party cookies belong to the website that created them. Third-party cookies are created by websites other than the one the user is visiting and data are collected, processed and used by third parties and subject to the provider's Privacy Policy. The third-party is therefore required to inform the user about the use of cookies and obtain, if necessary, the user's consent in its capacity as data controller. If a website enables the placement of third-party cookies, the third party has the responsibility for ensuring users are clearly informed about cookies and for obtaining their consent. Users must be adequately informed, even if in the streamlined manner provided for by law, when they access the website that enables the storage of third-party cookies, that is, when they access the content provided by third parties and, in any case, before the cookies are downloaded on their computer.

WHAT TYPES OF COOKIES ARE USED ON THIS WEBSITE?

This website uses technical cookies, in order to help the website perform smoothly and to optimize the user's surfing experience.

This website uses third-party cookies (Google Analytics) for statistical purposes in order to improve the website's content. Google Analytics is a website analysis service provided by Google Inc. Said data is collected only for statistical purposes and anonymously.

The data collected by Google Analytics, including the user's IP address, is anonymously sent to the Google Inc server. These cookies cannot be used to profile or identify users, but exclusively for statistical purposes in the aggregate.
